CTAF Mission Story

BY BRIG. GEN. CHARLES F. BORN
Commander, Crew Training Air Force

CREW Training Air Force, which has produced more than 20,000 combat ready aircrew members since its activation in April 1952, is a companion organization to the Flying and Technical Training Air Forces of the Air Training Command.

Our mission as a part of this vast training complex is (1) to assemble individual rated specialists (pilots, observers, gunners, flight engineers, etc.) into fighter, bomber and interceptor aircrews and (2) to put them through a program of advanced flying training that will make them highly proficient teams in the use of first-line aircraft as combat weapons. In order to accomplish this mission CrewTAF has approximately 45,000 personnel operating a chain of nine bases which are subdivided into three-base fighter, bomber and interceptor systems.

Prior to presenting a more detailed picture of our operation I feel it will be helpful to outline some of the basic considerations that have governed the evolution of aircrew training methods since World War I. As a means of making a clear distinction between the functions of flight training and aircrew training it should be borne in mind that whereas flight training qualifies individuals to perform as pilots, or observers or in other specialized rated assignments, the purpose of aircrew training is to bring these crewmembers together as a team. In the crew phase of training there are two fundamental elements of instruction—transition from training aircraft to heavier and faster combat aircraft and the operation of the gun-bomb-rocket systems with which combat aircraft are equipped.

During the period from 1918 to 1926 the Air Service was using World War I aircraft almost exclusively. Moreover, the close similarity in performance between the training and combat aircraft of that period practically eliminated the problem of transition. It was not until the advent of the Curtiss P-1, the P-2, the Keystone bomber and other new models in 1927 that transition training presented any problems. Even then the type and extent of transition training was left largely up to the individual commands, and this pattern was to continue until

Pentagon To Ask Equitable Family Medical Care Bill

The Defense Department will sponsor dependent care legislation next year which Secretary Charles E. Wilson says will bring about "better results" for the serviceman and his family.

This was revealed at the Secretary's weekly press conference, where Mr. Wilson and Assistant Defense Secretary (Health and Medical) Melvin A. Casberg answered questions about implementation of the Moulton Commission report.

The Moulton Commission, in a report submitted to the Defense Secretary almost five months ago, recommended that civilian doctors and hospitals be used to supplement family medical care given at Armed Forces facilities.

The Commission pointed out that scores of thousands of Service families are unable to use military facilities, either because these are overcrowded or because the dependents do not live adjacent to Service installations.

Dr. Casberg seemed reluctant at the press conference to state flatly that the upcoming legislation would embody without change the conclusions of the Moulton Commission. He said, however, that the bill "will probably give broader dependent care" and "certainly more equitable than has been given in the past."

Mr. Wilson noted that the present status of the dependent care program is not clearly defined—with some families obtaining excellent care and others none.

He said that the Defense Department wants to clear up the matter of whether dependent care is a gratuity on the part of the government, "or is it something that the man has a right to expect for his family?"

There has been talk at the Pentagon

SecDef Wilson Gives View On Commissary Policy

Secretary Charles E. Wilson declared this week that the Defense Department will carry out the intent of Congress with regard to commissaries in the United States, but "leaning . . . on the side of keeping a commissary," rather than shutting it down on 31 Dec.

His remark, made at a Pentagon press conference, strengthened reports published in recent issues of THE JOURNAL that few commissaries will be closed.

It has been stated that if the Defense Department follows the recommendations of the Services, less than 10 will be closed on the basis of official criteria for the commissary study.

Meantime, the chances are good that the Department's position will be crystallized next week, when Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah, (Manpower and Personnel) is tentatively scheduled to hold a press conference.

Dr. Hannah and his associates have been reviewing commissary data for almost a month and it is probable he will

10% Manpower Slash Faces Three Services

A 10 per cent across-the-board cut in manpower strength of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps is under active discussion at the Pentagon. As many as 300,000 men and women may be taken out of uniform in the next 18 months.

If approved, the slash would save at least $1 billion in direct personnel costs in the budget, plus many more hundred millions of dollars indirectly, such as in closed facilities and reduced need for supplies and equipment.

This prospective manpower cut would be imposed on the projected fiscal '54 year-end strengths, which total 2,398,000 for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The Air Force will not be cut. As its wing strength grows—to 115 by the end of the current fiscal year and to a reported 127 in fiscal '55—the chances are good that the Air Force, reversing the trend, will be increased slightly, possibly by 10,000 men above its 30 June '54 objective of 960,000.

Disagreement has developed regarding the magnitude of the manpower reductions which are receiving vigorous support at the highest civilian levels of the Defense Department. As reported in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, a "flap" is on.

Actually, the strength reduction plan now being kicked around at the Pentagon, with a final decision due before 5 Dec., would be more than 10 per cent of present strength.

This is because the Army is said to have at least 50,000 men above its 30 June target of 1,423,000 and the Navy probably has 20,000 or 25,000 men above the 745,000 fiscal year-end goal.

The Marine Corps strength is reported to be relatively close to the 230,000 men with which it is scheduled to end the current fiscal year.

Thus, if the 10 per cent cut in fiscal '55 goes into effect, the reduction between now and 30 June 1955 would be close to 300,000.

Lending credence to the apparent manpower hassle is the fact that two special manpower briefings were conducted this week, as Pentagon authorities moved closer to the 5 Dec. deadline when budget estimates must be submitted to Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

Defense Department officials said that on Monday, Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens and General Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, flanked by top aides, briefed Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah for more than an hour.

Two days later, possibly at Dr. Hannah's request, these Army officials presented a duplicate briefing for Mr. Wilson and his top assistant, Deputy Defense Secretary Roger M. Kyes, it was reported.

Mr. Stevens is believed to have reiterated at their briefings a statement he (Please turn to Page 341)

VI. SECDEF EXPLAINS PROGRAM

(At his press conference this week, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson was accompanied by Melvin A. Casberg, M.D., Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical). Secretary Wilson made the following statement on the health and medical program of Department of Defense. This is the sixth in a series of explanatory statements made by Mr. Wilson, all of which THE JOURNAL has published in full text.)

IN order to meet the anticipated requirements of the military service for the next few years, every effort will be made toward improvements within the medical and health fields in the Department of Defense. We are studying this from all angles with the purpose of increasing efficiency and eliminating duplications.

Dr. Melvin A. Casberg, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical) has the responsibility within the Office of the Secretary of Defense for all matters pertaining to the health of the Armed Forces. He is responsible for advising and assisting the Secretary of Defense in establishing policies, plans, programs, and procedures in the broad fields of health and sanitation, medical care and treatment of patients, and administration of hospitals and related treatment facilities.

Organizationally, there is only one subdivision—Office of Planning and Liaison—within the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical); however, there are five major areas of consideration. The following list of areas together with a brief description will give an idea of the specific duties of the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical).

PERSONNEL

Programs of the three military departments pertaining to medical and allied specialty personnel are coordinated within this office, thereby eliminating unnecessary duplication of effort and insuring maximum efficiency and utilization of these personnel.

Through collaboration with the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower and Personnel) policies and criteria for determination of health and medical manpower requirements by the military departments are developed. In developing these policies and criteria, the health and medical manpower requirements of the military departments and their integration into recommended Department of Defense needs are reviewed. The procedures to be followed by the military departments in the administration of provisions of pertinent laws pertaining to the induction and call of doctors and other health personnel on active duty are developed to insure uniformity. The procurement, assignment, and utilization of health and medical personnel by the military departments are studied, and appropriate policies and criteria are developed. Plans for health and medical training programs including portion of the Reserve program of the military departments are also developed, reviewed and coordinated.

As a result of work done in the field of MEDICAL PERSONNEL, a policy was established lowering the physical standards for physicians, dentists, and veterinarians who were liable for service under the Doctor Draft Law. This made it possible for the military departments to accept many of those individuals who had previously been disqualified for physical defects which did not prevent them from being active in their civilian occupation, and who could reasonably be expected to be productive in the Armed Forces. A policy was also established to utilize graduates of Class B and foreign medical schools who met certain qualifications and were liable for service under the Doctor Draft Law.

Studies have been made regarding the provision of scholarships for students in medical schools, dental schools, veterinary schools, and schools of nursing. This long-range procurement plan for Regular officers is being carefully studied.

One of the current projects being given a great deal of consideration is that of MEDICAL CARE FOR DEPENDENTS of military personnel. A Citizens' Advisory Commission on Medical Care for Dependents of Military Personnel was appointed by the Secretary of Defense, with Dr. Harold G. Moulton as Chairman. This Commission was established to make an objective study and analysis of providing medical care to dependents of military personnel, and its report was submitted on 30 June 1953. It is anticipated that legislation will be drafted after a thorough study and evaluation of various methods of providing medical care for dependents of military personnel.

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

Department of Defense broad policies and standards for the medical care and treatment of patients are developed. The professional aspects of joint health and medical activities of the Department of Defense are reviewed and policies formulated. In this field, definite progress has been made. Recognition has been given to personnel engaged in military medical research. A policy was established clarifying responsibilities in regard to military medical symposia in connection with medical research programs.

AND EXPERIMENTAL PROGRAM has been established to incorporate military and disaster medicine in five designated medical schools. Upon completion of this experiment the results will be evaluated and determination will be made as to the feasibility of including such a program in the curriculum of medical schools. Directives have been issued on the Armed Forces Epidemiological Board, Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, Armed Forces Medical Library, and the Armed Forces Medical Publication Agency, setting forth the organization, function, responsibility, and administration of each as joint medical activities.

ADMINISTRATION

Department of Defense broad policies and standards for the administration of hospitals and related treatment facilities are developed. Standard medical nomenclature, reports, and records for use by the military departments are prescribed. Policies governing the blood and blood derivatives program of the Department of Defense are formulated. Health and medical aspects of mobilization and disaster plans and related policies are developed. In collaboration with the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics), policies and procedures governing medical supply operations are developed. In collaboration with the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Research and Development), requirements for health and medical research by the military departments are reviewed and Department of Defense policies are developed.

FACILITIES

The activities of the military departments are coordinated to eliminate unnecessary duplication of medical facilities and expenditure of funds. In collaboration with the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Properties and Installations) the requirements of the military departments are reviewed and policies and standards pertaining to the construction, acquisition, expansion, restoration, assignment, utilization, maintenance, and disposal of health and medical facilities are developed. Studies are currently being made on cross-servicing and cross-utilization of medical facilities to insure the best utilization of these facilities in the three military departments, thereby reducing expenditures and increasing efficiency.

LIAISON

Liaison between the Department of Defense and the civilian health and medical professions is maintained. This results in better cooperation and mutual understanding between military and civilian medicine. Liaison with other governmental, non-governmental, and international organizations is maintained on health and medical matters of mutual interest and responsibility, and arrangements are made for Department of Defense representation at international medical conferences.

As an example of the liaison maintained between the activities of military medicine and civilian health associations, schools, and allied organizations, an orientation program was initiated during fiscal year 1953. Sixteen outstanding leaders in the fields of civilian medicine, dentistry, nursing, hospital administration and veterinary medicine were invited to attend certain meetings in this office. At that time, current staff projects were presented and discussed, and the objectives of the medical mission of the Department of Defense were outlined. Guests were also given an opportunity to participate in the meetings and often presented specific problems of mutual interest. It is felt that in the final evaluation this orientation program has resulted in better understanding of allied problems on the part of civilian health organizations and has further strengthened the close liaison between civilian and military medicine.

During the past year, the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical) and members of his staff attended two medical planning conferences which were supported by senior medical representatives of NATO countries. The success of these two meetings is most significant and will serve to materially strengthen mutual understanding of the problems of military medicine on an international basis.

In the performance of the above functions, the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical) has a civilian health and medical advisory council consisting of six members who are outstanding in the health and medical fields of endeavor within the United States.

Gen. Born Tells of Crew Training Force

the more advanced models of bomber, pursuit and attack aircraft began to appear on the scene in the mid-thirties. Eligibility requirements and transition time then were rapidly revised upward to qualify aircrews on the more complex aircraft such as the B-17 and P-36.

Still, however, the final responsibility for transition and crew training rested with the operational units until the World War II expansion program required the activation of the Second and Third Air Forces to take over the job. Following the postwar cutback operational commands once more took over the aircrew training functions under a system that was to continue until the outbreak of fighting in Korea in June 1950.

It then became immediately apparent that our combat commands were no longer in a position to handle the crew training job. Two factors underscored this conclusion. First of all our combat units were almost overnight fully committed to purely operational missions and hence did not have the capability to continue crew training at a sufficient pace to meet the combat replacement rates. Coinciding with this development was the delivery in quantity of new high-performance jet fighters, bombers and interceptors such as the North American F-86, the Boeing B-47 and the Lockheed F-94.

Consequently the Air Training Command was queried at once as to whether it could conduct a combat crew training program for urgently needed fighter and medium bomber aircrews. The answer was "yes" and by July 1, 1950, F-51 pilots were receiving combat crew instruction at Nellis AFB, Nevada. Shortly afterward, in August 1950, a B-29 medium bomber crew training program got underway at Randolph AFB, Texas. This was the beginning of a crew training build-up within the flying training element of the Air Training Command which led to the activation of the Crew Training Air Force on 1 April 1952, with headquarters at Randolph AFB.

Field Supervision

The necessity for establishing CrewTAF as a third training air force was dictated by the need for close field supervision of crew training functions by a single headquarters to be staffed largely with combat-experienced officers.

Before the cease fire had been negotiated in Korea CrewTAF had acquired three additional bases to increase its strength to a total of nine wings which operated at peak capacity to meet the Air Force's requirement for combat-ready aircrews. Even though hostilities have ceased our organization will have to maintain, and in some cases increase, the pace of crew production to support the Air Force's transition from conventional to jet operations and to bring our operational units to their programmed level of strength and keep them there. Also it will provide a means for rapid expansion of our combat wings should the need arise.

At present our command shapes up like this: medium bomber training is conducted for 11-man B-29 crews at Randolph while three-man B-47 crews receive transition training at Pinecastle AFB, Orlando, Fla. and Wichita AFB, Wichita, Kans.

Interceptor Program

In the interceptor program we have Perrin AFB, Sherman, Tex.; Tyndall AFB, Panama City, Fla.; and Moody AFB at Valdosta, Ga. At Perrin and Tyndall interceptor pilots fly the North American F-86D interceptor. In this F-86D program the pilot as a one-man crew has to be proficient in the operation of radar interception devices as well as being a top notch flyer. These one-man interception missions are considered to be the most difficult flying tasks in the Air Force. The two-man crews for Lockheed F-94C and Northrop F-89D aircraft are trained at Moody.

Our fighter pilot training system includes Nellis AFB, Las Vegas, Nev.; Luke AFB, Glendale, Ariz.; and Laughlin AFB, Del Rio, Tex. At Nellis we train fighter pilots in air-to-air and air-to-ground missions in the North American F-86, while Luke specializes in close ground support training conducted in the Republic F-84.

Laughlin uses the Lockheed T-33 to prepare fighter pilots for entry into the F-84 program at Luke.

There are two vital considerations which are paramount in all our fighter, bomber and interceptor programs: First of all we must insure that our combat training is conducted in a manner that will simulate actual battle conditions as closely as possible. In this regard we recognize that realism in training is a must in qualifying our crews to go up against the real thing in combat. Also we must eliminate every element of risk which can be avoided through good air discipline, traffic control systems and aircraft maintenance.

Realistic Bombing

As a means of achieving realism we have developed bombing and gunnery ranges which offer our fighting pilots an opportunity to operate against targets that include convoys of military vehicles and gun emplacements. In our bomber program missions up to 14 hours are flown over targets suitable for live bomb drops and over large cities where radar bomb scoring devices tabulate the accuracy of simulated bombing. Frequent fighter interception of these bomber formations is scheduled to give the B-29 gunners a chance to get gun camera records of sighting proficiency.

At our interceptor bases we are each week flying hundreds of training missions in which radar-guided, rocket-armed aircraft are "scrambled" to locate "enemy" planes and bring them within the range required for a "kill."

In order to keep our training abreast of the latest air combat techniques we maintain constant liaison with Strategic Air Command, Tactical Air Command and the Air Defense Command—the organizations to which our crews are assigned after completing their training. On the basis of constructive suggestions and evaluations received from these agencies we are constantly standardizing new instruction techniques and feeding them into the program.

Support Functions

Of course the most important factor of all in making possible the constant improvement of the quality of our aircrews is the ability of our instructor personnel and our support personnel in supply, maintenance and administrative functions. At our fighter base over 70 percent of our instructors are combat-experienced. Many of them are jet aces while others are veterans of the close ground-support slugfest carried on against Communist supply lines, communications and troop concentrations.

As a final consideration in evaluating the CrewTAF mission it is worth noting that this command has set several important precedents in the area of Air Force training methods. It is the first single organization ever set up to conduct the training of fighter, bomber and interceptor aircrews for all the major combat commands in the Air Force. It is the first system under which crew training has been fully integrated with the technical and flying training elements of the Air Training Command.

Several major advantages are apparent in the present Crew Training concept. It provides a single specialized agency to receive and put into effect the latest developments in air combat tactics. It promotes the standardization of a high proficiency level on the part of all aircrews which enter the using organizations.

We are proud of the progress we are making in conducting our mission, and we value most highly the fine cooperation and support we are receiving from our sister services and from the other Air Force commands.

More Army Promotions To Capt. Due Next Week

The Army is expected to announce early next week the promotion to captain of approximately 200 first lieutenants.

All will hold the same date of rank—4 August 1950. Additional promotions of first lieutenants with the same date of rank will be announced later.

As a result, the Army has had to run a rank and precedence check on these officers to get them in proper seniority in the promotion standings.

The upcoming promotions follow 187 to capture previously announced.

There will be only the two increments to captain during November, according to present plans.

Army officials said that it is possible some promotions to major and lieutenant colonel will also be announced next week.

Rep. Shafer Opposes Sale Of Bottled Goods on Posts

Representative Paul W. Shafer (R.-Mich.) this week criticized the new policy permitting the sale of bottled liquor at Army and AF messes as a "bureaucratic blunder." He plans, he said, to take steps to have the directive rescinded.

He described as "unnecessary, unwise and unfair" an order effective last 1 Sept. permitting the sale of bottle liquor by officers' and noncommissioned officers' clubs and messes.

Mr. Shafer said a six-week survey in 1952 showed that the State of Michigan lost $30,000 in taxes by sale of whiskey by distillers to military establishments in the State.

Meanwhile a survey conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion has reported that 44 per cent of those questioned approve of liquor being sold at officers' and enlisted men's clubs on military posts while 47 per cent disapprove. Nine per cent expressed no opinion.

In a copyright article appearing widely in the daily press, George Gallup, director of the Institute, commented that rarely has an Institute survey provoked such violent contrasts of views.

The question merely covered sales at clubs and not the proposed sales by bottles.

Considerable resentment has been aroused by an article appearing 11 Nov. in the Raleigh News and Observer commenting on the "open bar system" at Ft. Bragg. The article, signed by James L. Whitfield, made it appear that there is considerable drinking at the post and discussed alleged rises in traffic cases, sex cases, civil offenses, venereal diseases, etc. Personnel on the post, while aware of the crusading spirit of the traditionally "dry" newspaper (long edited by the late Josephus Daniels), were indignant that the new service regulations had been used as a vehicle for reviving prohibition, particularly in that some Ft. Bragg personnel feel it attempted to use Service personnel in an unfair light.

"Top Citizen Soldier" Is New Army Asst. Sec'y

Maj. Gen. Hugh M. Milton, II, USAR, a noted educator and veteran Reserve officer, was sworn in as Assistant Secretary of the Army, Manpower and Personnel, at a ceremony in the office of Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens on 19 Nov.

Mr. Stevens described General Milton, who has served on active duty since February 1951 as Executive for Reserve and ROTC Affairs on the Army Special staff, as a "top citizen soldier."

Like Mr. Stevens, Assistant Secretary Milton began his military career as an artillery officer in WWI. He served in WWII for 52 months, 21 of them overseas in the Pacific.

General Milton succeeds Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell, who attended the swearing in ceremony. Secretary Mitchell, smiling broadly, presented his successor to Secretary Stevens.

The oath of office was administered by Maj. Gen. William E. Bergin.

Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott and Navy Secretary Robert B. Anderson headed a list of Pentagon officials who watched the ceremony.

General Matthew B. Ridgway, Chief of Staff, and General Charles L. Bolte, Vice Chief of Staff, were the senior military officers present.

Among the other guests were Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Milton and their two sons, Hugh M., III, and John Baldwin Milton.

The U.S. Naval Photographic Interpretation Center, Naval Receiving Station, Washington, D. C., surpassed its goal for the Red Feather Campaign by 215% under the chairmanship of Mr. Stephen Johnson.

The Commanding Officer, Comdr. L. W. Keith, USN, was presented with an award in appreciation of the contributions of the military and civilian personnel attached to the Center. P.I.C. personnel can well be proud of being recognized for a job "well done."

Set USMC Release Policy

The Marine Corps announced this week that Reserve officers returning from the Far East may request immediate release from active duty on arrival in the United States providing they have less than three months remaining of their active duty tours.

Headquarters said those who are released prior to completion of two years' active duty are not jeopardized by such early release and their recall status will be the same as their contemporaries who completed 24 months of active duty.

AF Releases First Photo And Data on Douglas X-3

The radical design of the Air Force's X-3 research aircraft, which has been under test for a year, was revealed this week as the Air Force prepared to turn the flying laboratory over to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics for further research.

The X-3 was designed and built by Douglas, Santa Monica Division under joint sponsorship of the AF, NACA, and the Navy. The project was directed by the Air Research and Development Command to test the design features of an aircraft suitable for sustained flights at extremely high speeds.

Other research aircraft previously announced include the Air Force's Bell X-1, X-2, and X-5, and the Northrop X-4, and the Navy's Douglas D558-1 and D558-II.

The Douglas D558-II, known as the Skyscrot, also set a new speed record, it was reported this week by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. The former record of 1,238 miles an hour was set in 1951 by Bill Bridgeman. The new record was set by NACA test pilot Scott Crossfield who flew the research plane at 1,272 miles per hour or a mach speed of 1.96, nearly twice the speed of sound.

Appearance of the X-3 is striking as it has a slender fuselage with an extremely long, tapered nose and short wings located well back toward the tail.

Length of the X-3 is 66 feet 9 inches, nearly three times its span of 22 feet 8 inches. The top of its tail, rising on a boom over the twin-jet exhausts, measures 12 and one-half feet from the ground. The airplane stands on tricycle landing gear which retract into the fuselage.

Although its gross weight and length exceed slightly those of the DC-3, the X-3 wing span is less than the span of the DC-3 tail.

Instead of armament, the X-3 carries a payload of 1200 pounds of research instruments, many of which were specially made for the airplane and supplied by NACA. Comprehensive instrumentation includes more than 850 "pin hole" orifices to record pressures over various portions of the airplane. Temperature readings are registered at 150 points while stresses and air loads are indicated by 180 electric strain gages.

Information obtained in the design, development and flight tests of the X-3 is being made available to the aircraft industry through NACA and military channels.

Medical Scholarship Plan Prepared For Congress

Subject to Budget Bureau approval, the Defense Department will ask Congress next year to vote legislation which would authorize military scholarships at medical, dental and nursing schools.

Students would receive free tuition and a living expense—probably similar to the Holloway Plan in the Navy—and would agree to serve a specified minimum tour in the Armed Services, probably on a year-for-year basis.

The plan to introduce such legislation was reported at Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson's press conference this week, to which he was accompanied by Assistant Defense Secretary (Health and Medical) Melvin A. Casberg.

Dr. Casberg said the Pentagon opposes establishment of a West Point of Medicine, but supports a plan to use existing schools as a source for career officers in the Medical Service.

The Assistant Secretary pointed out that at the present time Regular officers comprise only about one-fourth the strength of the Medical Services. He said a three-fourths ratio is more desirable.

On the year-for-year basis, Dr. Casberg noted there is still discussion as to whether the year of intern training should count. It may be that the plan will require five years service in uniform for the four years of medical training.

He gave no indication as to the number of students in medical schools who would receive such scholarships, explaining that the enrollment would vary in accordance with projected needs of the Services.

Dr. Casberg maintained that if 20 percent of the scholarship medical personnel agreed to remain in uniforms as a career after their obligated service, "we would still be ahead."

He emphasized that after the obligated service was completed, those who had received scholarships could resign. He said that otherwise the Services would have a "captive element."

Dr. Casberg, in answer to a question, said that with the proposed program it should be possible to eliminate the doctors' draft.

He said there are serious doubts whether this legislation will be extended when it expires two years hence. After that time, the Defense Department will depend on doctors who are within the draft age.

Asked if the Budget Bureau had yet approved the plan, Dr. Casberg said, "not yet," and added "this is a bill which eventually we hope will have the approval. We feel it is a much cheaper way to gain men of even higher caliber than it would be to establish a Federal school of medicine."

Here in Dr. Casberg's words is an outline explanation of the new plan:

"This is one of the factors that is of great interest to us in establishing a hard core regular career service for the medical and health professional groups. Personally, and the Department of Defense insofar as I know has been opposed to establishing a West Point in medicine because we feel the strength of the physicians, dentists, and so on in the Armed Forces is in great part due to the very diverse source—Harvard graduate working next to a Stanford graduate, and so on."

"However, in lieu of having a West Point in medicine, we feel that some system should be established whereby scholarships were awarded to young individuals who in return would repay in time of service very similar to the arrangement, let's say, that has been established in West Point and Annapolis."

"Now, there are two factors there which I think we should clarify. One is that we do not anticipate choosing the matriculants. That is a prerogative of the deans of the schools of medicine."

"I mean, we are not going to say this man will be admitted for the very simple reason that the deans would not accept such a procedure; and furthermore, of course, it would keep quite a political issue off our backs; everybody trying to get somebody to sponsor as a scholar in a school of medicine."

"Then we envision this bill that has been drawn up would give an opportunity—say a dean of a school of medicine had admitted a hundred students; admitted according to the regular competitive method; that the Air Force, Army, Navy would have a certain number of scholarships that they would like to establish in this school."

Army Aviation Expands, More Pilots Are Needed

The Army said this week that as a result of the expansion of Army aviation, eligible Regular and Reserve officers may make immediate application for flight training.

The Army now operates 2,500 aircraft, which are assigned to Infantry, Artillery, Armor, Signal Corps, Corps of Engineers, Medical Service Corps and Transportation Corps units.

Fixed wing aircraft operated by the Army include both single and twin-engine planes, carrying up to six persons. Helicopters include all types, from two-place reconnaissance types to transports carrying 10 persons.

Remain in Basic Branches

Officers accepted for flight training will remain in their basic branches if those branches have organic aircraft. Officers in other branches may request transfer to one of these branches when applying for flight training.

Eligible officers must hold a grade not higher than first lieutenant and be less than 30 years old. During flight training, officers receive incentive pay for aerial flights as authorized by regulations, which continues as long as they remain on flight status.

Two Phases
Army flight training is given in two phases. The first, consisting of 17 weeks' basic flight instruction, is conducted by the AF at Gary AFB, San Marcos, Tex.

The second, consisting of 12 weeks' tactical flight training, is conducted by the Army Aviation School, Ft. Sill, Okla.

Upon completion of the course at Army Aviation School, officers are designated Army aviators and are entitled to wear Army Aviator Wings.

In addition to remaining eligible for attendance at service schools of their respective branches, Army aviators become eligible for attendance at advanced flying courses in helicopter training and tactics, instrument flying, and twin-engine transition flight training.

Qualifications Listed

Successful completion of a Company Officer Course, Associate Company Officer Course, Officer Candidate Course or Officer Basic Course of a branch of service authorized Army Aviation qualifies an individual for flight training from point of service. An officer who desires flight training should submit his application in advance of anticipated completion of any such course.

In the case of ROTC graduates, applications should be submitted no less than 6 to 8 weeks before completion of branch courses. Officer Candidates may apply as directed by local OCS authorities.

Impending Cut in Manpower May Top 10%

made to Pentagon reporters on Friday, 13 Nov. The Army Secretary told a press conference that combat effectiveness should not be reduced.

He said the Army is studying its manpower situation on a continual basis, added that some reductions may be possible—how much of a cut he did not know at this time—but stressed that combat effectiveness should not be impaired.

General Ridgway, who delivered a lengthy dissertation last week on ground force manpower needs (THE JOURNAL, 14 Nov.), told his civilian chiefs of the consequence involved in proposed manpower cuts.

The Chief of Staff has said on many occasions that he feels it his duty as a military commander to advise civilian superiors of the ramifications of proposed actions in terms of military effectiveness. He has emphasized that once decisions are made, military commanders must carry these out to the best of their ability, with complete loyalty in the execution.

On the basis of previous statements, it can be assumed that Mr. Wilson will direct the Army, Navy and Marine Corps to maintain present symbols of combat strength, regardless of the eventual manpower cut which will be ordered.

Thus, it can be anticipated that the forthcoming budget will call for 20 Army combat divisions and 18 regimental combat teams, about 410 combat ships in the Navy, and three Marine Corps divisions and air wings.

Many observers do not see how the Army can be cut by about 200,000 men from its present strength without losing any fighting divisions or without losing combat effectiveness, but it is apparent that some Defense officials feel that this is possible. This is the keystone in the disagreement.

The Marines, with two divisions overseas, are confronted with a heavy replacement requirement and could be pinched by a 10 per cent cut, particularly if the Army were forced to withdraw some support because of manpower cuts.

The Navy, according to Admiral Robert C. Carney, probably can reduce its manpower to some degree, possibly by dropping manning levels on ships and cutting supporting forces. He says, however, he does not feel there could be heavy cuts in Navy strength with the present deployment.

The present budget provides about $11,274 billion for manpower of all the Services to cover such items as pay and allowances, subsistence, individual clothing, transportation and other personnel activities.

Thus, if a 10 per cent cut in strength is ordered, more than $1 billion could be cut from next year's budget in this single category.

Additionally, of course, with 10 per cent fewer personnel, the Services could and would close installations. This would save more money.

There is some feeling at the Pentagon, particularly in view of the high-level briefings this week, that the personnel strengths Defense Department recommends to the Bureau of the Budget will not reflect cuts as drastic as the 10 per cent proposal. A compromise is a possibility and Service leaders are fighting hard to convince Mr. Wilson and Mr. Kyes.

On the other hand, there are informed sources who maintain that having cut the Air Force last year, the Defense Department and the Bureau of the Budget must find savings elsewhere in the Armed Forces for fiscal '55 and that these savings will come largely in manpower—primarily from the Army, but on a proportionately equal basis from the Navy and Marine Corps.

Army Navy Air Force Journal 341
21 November 1953

This likelihood is strengthened by the recollection of recent remarks by both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Kyes that developments in new weapons and strategy concepts require a new look at the military establishment, including the ratio of strength in the various Services.

LANDS WITH A 12-TON LOAD ...ON AN 855 FOOT STRIP!

No cargo airplane ever built can get into and out of the tight spots with a big bulk load, like the combat-proven Fairchild "Flying Boxcar." The C-119 lands and brakes to a stop on an 855 foot runway with a 12-ton load! Designed in every detail as a general military bulk cargo transport, the C-119 is equipped with reversible propellers and a powerful main and nose wheel braking system that enable it to land on the aircraft equivalent of the proverbial "dime." Here is the medium transport cargo airplane that so exactly meets the combat-transport needs of the U. S. Armed Forces!

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

CNO To Scrutinize Manpower In Pacific

Admiral Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, said this week on his return from a Far Eastern tour that he is going to take a very careful look at the program in that area to see where manpower cutbacks can be made.

Asked if he could operate the Navy at its present force level with fewer people in 1955, Admiral Carney said as far as he can see the personnel saving "couldn't be very much." He noted that there has been no change in the Navy's requirements in the Pacific and that any cutbacks would depend on decisions about future deployment of Naval forces.

Regarding the 1955 budget, he confirmed reports that the Navy will ask for another Forrestal-class carrier (two are now under construction and a third has been approved), and that funds are being requested to convert a Navy ship or ships for guided missile work. He said the Navy has "a number of hulls around" which it could use for this purpose.

Referring to the coming transfer of two destroyer-type vessels to the Nationalist Chinese on Formosa, he indicated that it is doubtful the Chinese will be supplied with additional vessels of that type. The reason, he said, is because "We don't have enough in our own locker to take care of our own sea lanes." In event of war, he said the United States would be "hard pressed" to provide adequate protection for commerce which would have to continue to flow to and from the country.

One USMC Board Meets; Another Is Postponed

The Marine Corps disclosed this week that it has temporarily postponed its fiscal 1954 selection board for captain to major and that a board to select 600 first lieutenants for temporary promotion to captain is now in session at HQMC.

The delay in convening a board to select majors was occasioned because waiting lists for promotion to that grade were not exhausted until last week. Headquarters said the board will be convened before the end of fiscal '54.

The board to select captains is headed by Col. Karl K. Louther. Other members are Lieutenant Colonels Irwin F. Wann, Jonas M. Platt, Kermit C. Zieg, John M. Robb, Richard J. Ofstad, William L. Flake and Walter R. Bartosh. The recorder is 1st Lt. Francis X. Quinn.

The latter board was convened on 12 Nov. It is making its selections under Public Law 188, 77th Congress, which provides for temporary promotion of officers in time of national emergency. There is no zone of eligibility and officers senior to the last officer selected are not considered as having been passed over for purposes of forced retirement.

Col. June Commands Group

Col. Frank M. June has assumed command of Marine Wing Service Group-27, Cherry Point, N. C., succeeding Lt. Col. Biney B. Truitt. Colonel Truitt will continue with the Group as Executive Officer.

Colonel June formerly was Assistant Inspector General of the Marine Corps, stationed in Washington, D. C.

Commands MAG-36

Col. James L. Neefus has assumed command of Marine Air Group 36, based at the Marine Corps Air Facility, Santa Ana, Calif. He succeeds Lt. Col. Wallace Slaphey who remains with MAG-36 as Executive Officer.

during recent weeks of a Bill of Rights for Servicemen. Presumably, the indefinite status of dependent care to which Mr. Wilson referred at his press conference could be handled in such legislation, aside from the specific legislative authorization needed to pay civilian doctors and hospitals for dependent care, as recommended by the Moulton Commission.

Dr. Casberg told reporters that he has met "unofficially" with the American Medical Association on the proposed dependent care legislation. He said there is not "total agreement," but observed that "we have come to closer purposes than a lot of people may think."

Under further questioning, Dr. Casberg said that the A.M.A. feels "that if we give dependent care of this type that it will be in some ways a federally subsidized type of medicine." He said there were differences of opinion as to "whether this is opening the wedge for socialization."

for today—

"As always, throughout human history, behind every product of man's genius stand the individual men who will either use it or fail to use it successfully . . . The man must be the master of the machine. Everything depends on him."

—GENERAL NATHAN F. TWINING

Mastery of man over machine is exemplified by our overwhelming air victories in Korea . . .

and, in another way, by the universal

"Suggestion Box" in American industry.

Free man — self-reliant, resourceful, inventive—makes the machine his servant. Socialized man — dependent, regimented, enslaved — survives only by mechanical and forced obedience.

This distinction is a key to the survival of free nations.

U. S. AIR FORCE

USAF Will Promote 7,300 In Fiscal '54

Air Force promotion quotas dispatched this week to major commands will permit approximately 7300 advancements to captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel beginning next 15 Feb. and continuing until the end of this fiscal year.

On a global basis, the Air Force authorized 250 promotions to colonel, 600 to lieutenant colonel, 2150 to major and 4300 to captain.

The quotas confirm earlier reports that promotions to colonel and lieutenant colonel would be extremely limited in relation to total number eligible for consideration and that selections to major and captain would be relatively much less difficult.

Following receipt of the quotas, the major commands stepped up action to convene selection boards which will choose officers for advancement to captain, major and lieutenant colonel.

Promotions to colonel will be recommended by a central selection board meeting at the Pentagon.

The 7300 promotions in the current program compare with approximately 9910 in the last program, which included about 5600 promotions to captain, 2700 to major, 1050 to lieutenant colonel and 560 to colonel.

Thus, a comparison between the fiscal '53 and '54 programs shows that the heaviest percentage reduction comes in the top two grades. There will be about 50 per cent fewer promotions to the top two ranks in '54 than last year.

Donaldson Wins Safety Prize In TAC Contest

First place in the Tactical Air Command competition to reduce vehicular accidents and promote safe driving habits has been awarded to Donaldson AFB, S. C.

Other winners were Shaw AFB, S. C., and the USAF Air Ground Operations School at Southern Pines, N. C., which won second and third places respectively in the contest.

Donaldson AFB was cited for reducing the number of motor accidents by government and private vehicles, and for its campaign to foster good driving habits on and off base.

The award trophy was presented to Brig. Gen. Glynne M. Jones, commander of the 63d Troop Carrier Wing at Donaldson, by General John K. Cannon, TAC Commander. Present during the ceremonies were Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglas, Jr., 18th AF Commander, Brig. Gen. Earl H. Alexander, 18th AF Deputy Commander, and staff officers of the 63d Troop Carrier Wing.

Brig. Gen. Cary to Dobbins

Brig. Gen. John B. Cary, USAF, chief of the operations branch at SHAPE since March, 1952, will report early in January for duty as commander of the 35th Air Division of the Air Defense Command at Dobbins AFB, Marietta, Ga.

He will report to Washington for five days temporary duty in December and will lecture at the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., before going to his new assignment.

Air Evac Cuts Death Rate Says MATS Chief

The establishment of an air evacuation service for wounded personnel during the Korean War resulted in the mortality rate for combat casualties being reduced more than 50 per cent compared to the WW II rate, Lt. Gen. Joseph Smith, commander of MATS, said this week.

In a radio broadcast sponsored by the American Legion, General Smith pointed out that only 2 per cent of all casualties died in Korea, whereas the WW II rate was 4½ per cent, and WW I rate 8 per cent.

Since most men were in a U.S. hospital within five days of receiving a wound, it was "possible to start the healing process sooner," he said.

General Smith also gave them statistics on MATS. During the Korea action, MATS airlifted more than half a million passengers and 70,000 tons of critical cargo between this country and the Far East. MATS planes crossed the Pacific more than 35,000 times. Over 63,000 combat casualties were airlifted.

General Smith added that despite the fact the MATS planes operate on a 24-hour-a-day-in-and-day-out basis over some 115,000 miles of global air routes to 37 different foreign countries, MATS has the lowest accident rate in the Air Force.

During the first 10 months of this year, he said, over a billion passenger miles was flown without a passenger fatality.

Brig. Gen. H. R. Spicer Named CrewTAF Deputy

Brig. Gen. H. R. Spicer, wing commander at Nellis AFB, Las Vegas, Nev., has assumed duties as Deputy Commander of the Crew Training Air Force, with headquarters at Randolph AFB, Tex.

Announcement of General Spicer's new assignment was made by Brig. Gen. Charles F. Born, CrewTAF commander. Until a permanent successor for General Spicer at Nellis has been selected, he will spend most of his time on duty at that base.

General Spicer spent 14 months in a German prison camp during WWII after being picked up in the English Channel by the Nazis when he was forced to parachute from his badly damaged P-51 Mustang. A "pep talk" to fellow prisoners, which caused a near-riot, brought him a death sentence. He spent six months in solitary confinement and on the day scheduled for his execution he was liberated by Russian troops.

In August 1948, General Spicer took the first jet squadron—69 F-86 Shooting Stars—to Europe.

Coming to the Air Training Command in May 1950, he assumed command of Williams AFB, Ariz., and in March 1951 moved to Wichita AFB, Kansas, to open the new B-47 Stratojet base. He went to Nellis 14 Sept. 1953 to command CrewTAF's F-86 Sabre jet fighter school.

Airmen Force-Outs O.K.'d

The Air Force has given authority for the involuntary separation of about 1600 "submarginal" airmen who have shown that they are not likely to make progress in an Air Force career.

These are airmen who have finished at least two years service in the rank of basic airman (E-1) or three years as airman third class (E-2). Also eligible for involuntary release are airmen who do not attain a "four" rating in aptitude tests.

These airmen will be released in addition to the 35,000 who are going out involuntarily before the end of the year.

With Defense Department approval, the Air Force is making adjustments in its airmen strength by speeding the voluntary release of non-career-motivated personnel and the involuntary separation of others who can be assigned only on a very restricted basis because of lack of aptitude.

As their replacements, the Air Force will enlist increasing numbers of young men for a minimum of four years service.

This will help spread out the Air Force manpower cycle, which originally was expected to result in loss of about 200,000 airmen in fiscal year 1955 beginning next July. This replacement requirement now will be spread out over 18 months instead of 12.

New Fighter-Bomber Wing

A fighter-bomber wing will be activated at Clovis AFB, N. M., it was announced by General Thomas D. White, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, on Friday 13 Nov.

The new wing will be the 388th Fighter Bomber Wing, organized under the Tactical Air Command and equipped with North American F-86F Sabrejet Fighter-Bomber aircraft.

A housekeeping unit from Clovis has been occupying the base since the 50th Fighter-Bomber wing left for Europe to join NATO forces in July.

Name of the wing commander has not yet been announced.

Colonel Blume, speaking on the conference's theme, Foreign Languages in World Affairs, pointed out the needs of the Air Force for bi-lingual personnel in fulfilling its global responsibilities. Already the dawn of a new world is with us. At The Glenn L. Martin Company, for instance, new aircraft, guided missiles and electronic weapons are being designed not as today's flying vehicles but as coordinated and controlled spaceborne systems of tomorrow.

Behind that work is a powerful new team of Martin engineers working together under an entirely new concept of avionics known as Martin Systems Engineering. Today, that story is under security wraps, but this man can tell you that—

SECRETARY OF DEFENSE CHARLES E. WILSON

Family Care. The fact that the Department of Defense is formulating legislation to improve the status and equalize the application of medical and dental care for Service families is most encouraging.

Dependent care is one of the most important and fundamental of the so-called "fringe benefits." It reaches back to the early days of the Armed Services and is basic to morale. The necessity for family medical care is recognized by ranking line officers who know that their men are more efficient fighters when they are confident that the health of their loved ones is being taken care of. The military physicians, likewise, are more content when their professional practice in the Service is broadened to include women and children.

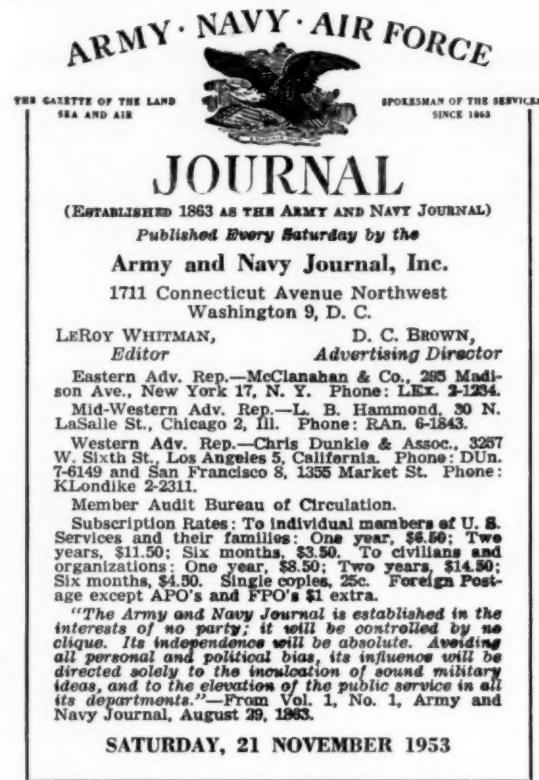

The Department's determination to support a strengthened system of family care is more significant when it is realized that it will do so in the face of considerable opposition. The Bureau of the Budget has been prone, in the past, to look at the subject from a purely cost standpoint—a cost which might be shifted to the individual. The American Medical Association, too, has not been happy about it—in fact Assistant Secretary of Defense Melvin A. Casberg admitted in his press conference this week that he had met unofficially with the AMA and that they are not in "total agreement" with the Department on its proposal to strengthen dependent care.

On the favorable side of the ledger is the fact that whenever attacks have been made on dependent care in the past, the House Committee on Armed Services has been vocal in its support. The closing of a number of hospitals during the pre-Korean economy wave was criticized by the Committee principally because it jeopardized family care.

The Department's course is based on the sound recommendations given to it by its own "Dependent Care Commission" last June. That Commission, headed by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, widely known economist and president emeritus of Brookings Institution, expressed the view that "one of the most important bolsters to morale is the assurance afforded military personnel on the fighting front that the welfare of their dependents is being looked after by the military organization itself." It urged that Congress make an explicit declaration of policy on the subject and that existing uncertainties and inconsistencies be removed.

Dependent care doubtless will get further support from the long over-due report of the Womble Committee. That Committee has been making a study and formulating recommendations on the problem of deteriorating career incentives. They completed their work some months ago, but the report has not yet been made public. With Congress due to reconvene within a few short weeks, it is important that the Womble Report be given widespread publicity so that the people and their representatives in Congress will be aware of what has been happening to the Services and be prepared to take action to restore lost rights, benefits, and prestige.

Services Boost Progress. The impetus given to industrial and scientific progress by the Armed Services is one of the valuable by-products of National Defense. Under the pressure of necessity, the Services foster the accelerated development of projects which would be too costly for industry to assume alone. Aircraft and electronics have made strides in the past 10 to 12 years which probably would have taken a generation or more in normal peace times.

One of these was evidenced this week when Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, chairman of the Board of the Radio Corporation of America, opened the most powerful radio station known to the western world, built by RCA for the U. S. Navy. Constructed at a cost of $14,000,000, the station is said to be able to reach ships and stations, and even submerged submarines, virtually around the world. It also represents a solution of the vexing problems of interference by electrical storms, northern lights and other meteorological phenomena. It is 22 times more powerful than any commercial station in this country.

Another instance of accelerated progress is that of the helicopter. Because of the great interest and support of the Armed Services, every branch of which now employs it, industry has compressed its development until in a matter of only a few years, helicopters are now flying steadily and successfully all over the world. Assistant Secretary of Defense Casberg reported this week that the rapid evacuation of wounded men by helicop-

USNA Science Hours

In the 31 Oct issue of THE JOURNAL regarding the Air Force Academy plans, on page 246, there is a table showing the proposed curriculum of the USAFA as compared to West Point and Annapolis.

Totals were listed as USAFA 1,538, USMA 1,904, and USNA 1,263. This last, I believe, was an error in printing as it should be 2,263.

Note: Mrs. McWilliams is right. In the total hours devoted to science subjects the figure for the U. S. Naval Academy should have been 2,263 instead of 1,263.

A WAVE Speaks
Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The article regarding Navy plans to reduce WAVE Commander rank in THE JOURNAL for 7 Nov., printed alongside one announcing selection of two Women Marines to Lt. Col. is another blow to morale of WAVE officers.

Anent this subject, a statement in an article on this subject which appeared in The Washington Post of 15 Oct. might be a "tip" on the thinking in BuPers. The statement is this, "Officials say that additional promotions now to commanders would benefit a few older WAVE officers unduly and work to the ultimate career disadvantage of younger WAVE officers. They hint delicately that the agitation comes mainly from a 'few individuals.' One wonders if they have also looked at the age of some of the Lts. who are losing promotional opportunities and want to get rid of them on the provision of the Integration Act whereby Lts. not on a selection list for Lt. Comdr. when they complete 13 years' total service are released with severance pay.

As for these "older WAVE officers"—in 1942 and 1943 the Navy was most happy to commission these women and to have their valuable training and experience when women were being brought into the Navy to serve wherever they could be used. Likewise some of these same women were selected for Regular Navy in 1948 (then six years older), with the assurance of Admiral Sprague that they were "guaranteed a career." Now it appears the Navy wants to be rid of them and the best way to accomplish this is not to promote them.

It is the double-talk and innuendo and the lack of a straightforward statement by the Navy that is doing irreparable harm. Some of the

Lt. (jgs) are now wondering what the future holds for them and whether it would be better to get out before they are too old to find desirable employment elsewhere.

One of the $64-dollar questions is —“Are these decisions the result of the top echelons of Male Officers, or do they stem from the top echelons of the ‘Women’s Navy’?”

At least the subject is out in the open and has been exposed to the public.

WAVE OFFICER

Disability Security

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Career personnel are now being forced into disability retirement, with disability retired pay very much less than that which they were entitled to when they entered the military profession. Disability with inadequate retired pay during periods of maximum family financial responsibility is a tragic end to a military career.

A faith in the maintenance of the Disability Security available at the start of a military career throughout the career is a fundamental element in decisions to enter the military profession.

COL., USA-RET.

Asst. SecNav Looks Into Complaints Registered Against Wave Policies

Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air James H. Smith, Jr., said this week that he is looking into complaints concerning the Navy's promotion program for Wave officers.

Mr. Smith, a Naval Reserve officer, is charged with the responsibility within the civilian secretariat for Navy personnel plans.

In an interview with THE JOURNAL on 18 Nov., the Secretary asked for a list of specific charges which have been leveled at current Wave policies. He said he will ask the Bureau of Personnel to comment on the charges and explain the position it has taken and the decisions it has reached in establishing the present Wave promotion pattern. He added that he then will be prepared to discuss the program in greater detail.

Secretary Smith indicated that it is the Navy's earnest desire to provide the Waves with equitable promotion opportunities and that if the present program does not make such provisions it will have to be changed. On the other hand, he said, if the present program merely seems to be unjust then some effort should be made to explain it more fully to the Waves.

The major charges which have been made by Wave supporters, and which were outlined in detail to Mr. Smith, are these:

1—Following passage of the Integration Act, the Navy integrated 10 Wave lieutenant commanders. Only four of this group (all serving in "spot" assignments as commanders) have been promoted. Thus, a selection of 40 per cent was made from this group.

compared to the normal 80 per cent selection for males.

2—One of these officers will be forced to retire on 1 March next year, although she has had only a 40 per cent chance for selection among her Wave contemporaries. Another will have to retire on 1 March 1955.

3—Wave recruiting literature for officers emphasizes that Waves enjoy the same promotional opportunities as male officers. However, 87 Wave lieutenants face forced separation during the next three years unless selected for promotion. Even if the Navy is able to promote 50 per cent of this group (which is improbable) the percentage who fall would be far in excess of selection failures among male officers.

4—Twelve lieutenant commanders became eligible for promotion to commander this year, 33 more become eligible in fiscal 1956. To provide even a 60 per cent selection opportunity for this group, all of the present Wave commanders would have to retire or a large number of junior officers would have to be added to Wave ranks and the Navy would have to promote to the full 10 per cent authorized in the rank of commander.

5—The Navy is attempting to align Wave and male promotions contrary to any provision of the Integration Act. The Marine Corps, with one Regular lieutenant colonel for every 14 Regular Women Marine officers (compared to a 1 to 31 ratio in the Wave Line), operates under the same law and has found such an alignment unnecessary and undesirable.

6—The Navy states that women in the rank of commander already are a year and one-half ahead of their male contemporaries. However, this fact is true because the Navy held up their promotion to the rank of lieutenant commander. The two junior commanders (whose service in LCDR. grade is responsible for this factor) spent approximately eight and nine years in grade as lieutenants.

U. S. Military-Developed Machines Fly First International 'Copter Routes

An American helicopter, developed for and widely used by all arms of the U.S. military services, has been converted to commercial passenger carrying and is in successful operation in the world's first international helicopter service.

The service is operated by Sabena Belgium Airlines. On 1 Sept. helicopter passenger service was opened between Brussels, Antwerp and Rotterdam, Holland; Brussels and Lille, France; and Brussels, Liege and Maastricht, Holland. So great was the demand that on 5 Oct. another line was opened between Brussels and Cologne and Bonn in West Germany.

On its passenger lines, Sabena uses American-manufactured Sikorsky S-55 helicopters. This is the same model that has been in use for some time by the U. S. Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard. The only material difference is that the Sabena equipment has additional insulation to cut down noise and vibration in the passenger compartment and the installation of eight upholstered seats. The seats are arranged: three against the rear wall facing forward and three against the front wall facing rearward, with two in between on the port side facing forward.

Mr. Anselme Vernieuwe, Sabena's operation manager, admits that under present operating conditions the helicopter service loses money. At a recent press conference in Brussels with about 30 American newspapermen who had gone to Belgium on Sabena's first New York-Manchester-Brussels air service, Mr.

Sabena's American-made S-55 helicopter about to land at the municipal heliport at Rotterdam, Holland, after a flight from Brussels, Belgium, in the world's first international 'copter passenger service.

Vernieuwe said that the direct operating cost of the helicopter service is almost double the income from passenger carrying. He declared, however, that statistics gathered thus far have demonstrated that the loss is overcome by the additional passenger traffic generated for their longer fixed-wing lines. Passengers in towns and cities not served by fixed-wing airlines formerly had to travel by train or bus; now they can take the helicopter to Brussels, transfer to fixed-wing aircraft and go any place in the world.

Furthermore, Mr. Vernieuwe believes that in about three years Sabena will be able to buy and operate helicopters carrying 40 passengers. With such capacity, he said, the helicopter service can more than pay its way.

The fare on the 'copters has been set at three Belgium francs (about six cents) per kilometer—the same as the fixed-wing fares. Thus the Brussels-Lille trip (60 miles) costs $6.00 one way or $10.80 round-trip and takes 55 minutes. On short hauls, Mr. Vernieuwe says, the down-town to down-town flight time by 'copter is about half that formerly required by fixed-wing service, counting bus time to and from airports.

So enthusiastic were the cities in Belgium, Germany, Holland and France for the helicopter service, that, except for Brussels where a city-owned site was not available, all of the municipalities set up their own heliports for use by Sabena. Also, by international agreement, formalities were eliminated to the point where the pilot does not even have to submit a passenger list, so that he is enabled to unload and load in three minutes.

Sabena also operates a mail service throughout Belgium, using American-made Bell helicopters.

22 January Remains a Firm Date—

COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

WHATEVER new and fancy dodges the Chinese Communists devise to confuse the prisoner-repatriation issues at Panmunjom, Secretary of State Dulles makes it clear that the armistice terms are inflexible in one respect; they state that all unreturned prisoners of war would be given their freedom 120 days after being placed in the control of the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission. The 120 days end on 22 January. The Red "explanation teams" have until then to do their explaining to the Chinese and North Koreans who thus far have stated they will refuse repatriation; if the explainer have not done their job by that time (owing to delays which the Red chiefs themselves have insisted upon, once they found their efforts less than 4 per cent successful) the remaining prisoners will be turned loose, free to go to Nationalist China or wherever they please or, if they choose, to enlist in the South Korean army, which seems to be where many of them will wind up.

The American position on this point was stated by the Secretary with a good deal of bluntness, occasioned by the recent declaration of the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, that the question of freeing the remaining prisoners should again be debated; Mr. Dulles finds that no further debate is called for; the armistice terms are precise, binding the combatants, and the Repatriation Commission's own original announcement of the 120-day termination binds the members of that neutral body as well.

THE PEACE TREATY is approximately as far away as it was last month. The Communists, startled by the brusque suggestion of Arthur H. Dean, the American negotiator, that 15 December be fixed as a date, have tentatively countered with "late December," but have made no suggestion of a suitable place, or indeed of any place other than Panmunjom. Nor have the Reds relaxed in their original insistence that Russia, India, Pakistan, Burma, and Indonesia be invited to sit in as neutrals, a proposal which Mr. Dean has rejected as often as it has risen, although cheerfully assenting to those nations' inclusion in a later discussion of all-Asia problems as distinguished from problems of the Korean settlement. There is nothing at this moment to indicate that the Reds have any intention of doing business, and we must be prepared now, as for the past two years, to having the Korean impasse maintained for an indefinite time to come. The Reds do well enough as things are now, and are in no hurry.

FRANCE, obviously barred from vigorous official expression of its own treaty intentions by two circumstances—the Government's automatic resignation following the Presidential election next month, and the fact that the Parliament will not take up the European Army plan until February—is still expected by Mr. Dulles to vote for the European Defense Community plan. The Secretary's remarks on this subject were elicited by some midweek questioning on whether the United States has an alternative plan for improving Europe's defenses, should the EDC treaty be rejected; the Secretary replied simply that he does not expect to see it rejected. To this he added that there is nothing whatever to a widely printed report that at the coming Bermuda conference France will be pressed to promise ratification, under a veiled threat otherwise that other western powers will push for West Germany's admission to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and encourage West Germany to arm on that basis. A "threat" hardly seems to be called for in the case of a nation so realistic and observant as is France, and it is awareness of Gallic realism which perhaps encourages Mr. Dulles' confidence in ratification next February. By that time France's Presidential election will be long past, the flurry of the pro forma Cabinet resignation will have died down, the NATO Council meeting (taking place in Paris, by the way) will have provided its own evidence of the value of common defense, and the atmosphere may be considerably more favorable to EDC than it seems this autumn.

MOSCOW, with Russia's eternal gift for justifying other nations' suspicions of her, has provided full evidence that she has no intention of participating in a Big Four conference for a long time to come. Her last note did it fairly well, with its insistence upon conditions which Moscow knew to be unacceptable—followed by Mr. Vishinsky's acrobatic declaration a moment later that the Western nations were blocking a meeting. "Those who put preliminary conditions do not want settlements" was that agile Muscovite's indictment—not of Moscow, but of the West! The three Western nations, having had their invitation declined three times now, have reached the not-too-bold judgment that Russia does not wish to come. Apart from this, however, Russia has given solid indication of why she has no taste for any early discussion of a German treaty. The occupying authorities in East Germany have suddenly abandoned the midsummer mockery of "toleration," with which Malenkov tried to lure Pan-German sentiment. The local labor leaders who took part in the June revolts and were granted amnesty now have been rearrested, and their fate is not yet indicated. The purge is on, and news of it passes so rapidly through chinks in the Iron Curtain that Moscow dares not at this time engage in negotiations affecting even West Germany's future, lest the Pan-German problems rise to embarrass the Moscow negotiators. In the light of these circumstances, the Bermuda meeting on 4 December can be of interest, as West Germany's future is a primary subject for Anglo-Franco-American discussion.

THE NATO COUNCIL will follow. Indeed the Military Committee will be assembling before the Bermuda conference is complete. The American delegation will include Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, Assistant Secretary Frank Nash, and General J. Lawton Collins in his new role as Admiral Radford's deputy in NATO affairs and America's permanent member of the Standing Group. This arrangement for General Collins, it will be recalled, springs from the considered judgment that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs has too many responsibilities to let him give adequate attention to the Standing Group (of which General Omar N. Bradley used to be a member ex-officio). General Collins has his whole time available for that task, and thus finds it possible to conduct studies which are most important, including extended conferences with Admiral Lynde D. McCormick as SACLAAT and General Gruenthal as SACEUR, and to make prolonged visits to ground, sea, and air forces in all sectors of both the European and the Atlantic Commands. The Military Committee, with General Collins as primary spokesman for its Standing Group, will meet on 7 December to hear the reports and recommendations of the principal commands and to conduct the "annual review" of added contributions in 1954 from the individual member nations, and thereafter to prepare the Committee's own recommendation to the Council when that body gathers the following week.

MEMO*News And Gossip
For Journal Readers*

A BUMPY ROAD AHEAD is likely for the plan to expand and make more equitable the dependent care program, in accordance with recommendations of the Moulton Commission. Asst. SecDef Casberg concedes that the A.M.A. "is not in total agreement" with the Defense Department. In addition to increasing dependent care, the Moulton report urges that legislative authority for family medical treatment be spelled out more specifically than is the case at present, particularly as regards the Army and Air Force. The A.M.A. has in the past opposed efforts to expand dependent care and is certain to be less than enthusiastic over any proposal which would strengthen the family care program on Capitol Hill. One another bump in the road is possible. The Budget Bureau could turn thumbs down on the proposal to use civilian doctors and hospitals to augment Service medical facilities for dependents. Estimated cost of implementing the Moulton report is put at $30-$40 million a year.

AMERICAN MED. ASSN. POWER in influencing Defense Department medical legislation was evidenced anew this week with disclosure that Pentagon officials have discussed and gained approval for the scholarship plan with A.M.A. officials. On the other hand, it was stated the proposal has not yet been taken up with the Budget Bureau, which speaks for the President.

AIR FORCE I.G'S have been alerted to keep an eye on billet accommodations for transient officers and airmen. Lack of sufficient furniture and equipment in these quarters was noted in a recent survey.

FOREST MANAGEMENT is a skill the Army cannot afford to take lightly. Newly released statistics show that in the Third Army area alone, there are about 732,000 acres in timber. For the five year period ending last December, timber and pulpwood worth almost $6 million was harvested; by 1960, the cutting may be five times the present rate. Work is done by private contracts under strict government control.

FOR THE FIRST TIME, a Navy officer, Capt. Miles P. DuVal, ret., has been elected to the board of directors of the Gorgas Memorial Institute of Tropical and Preventive Medicine. He was captain of the port of Balboa, C. Z., from 1941-44 and was Navy Dept. coordinator of Isthmian Canal Studies from 1946-49.

THE NEW PRESIDENT of the Assn. of Military Surgeons, Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service, has the distinction of being the youngest officer ever named to head the USPHS. At the age of 40, he was first appointed to the post in 1948.

AIR NATIONAL GUARD leaders are considering requesting legislation next year which would permit appointment of female nurses.

MINE WARFARE TRAINING will be stepped up in the Army. Divisions in the U.S. which formerly conducted eight hours' instruction now will up this requirement to 12 hours on order from the Chief of Army Field Forces.

THE WOMBLE REPORT may be made public next week. Asst. SecDef Hannah is scheduled to hold a press conference. He has been studying the report for several weeks.

TREASURY DEPT. officials have told the Defense Dept. that more than $51 million remains uncollected on matured Armed Forces leave bonds, issued in lieu of leave accrued and not taken. The bonds ceased to bear interest on 1 Oct. 1951. Holders are encouraged by the Government to redeem them and re-invest the cash in U.S. Savings Bonds, which pay interest.

ADMIRAL RADFORD had a fiscal loss awaiting him when he returned to Washington this week. The Comptroller General has ruled that the personal money allowance of $4000 per year for the JCS Chairman took effect for him on 15 Aug., and not on 10 July when he reported to Washington as "Prospective" JCS Chairman. The Navy put the question to the Comptroller.

NAVY PAPERWORK may be in for a big slash, but it will take a considerable amount of paperwork to do it. The field was asked to review currently required reports and make recommendations to streamline and eliminate them where possible. As a result more than 2600 recommendations were received. Each one, says the Navy, will receive complete analysis.

LT. GEN. CLIFTON B. CATES, former Commandant of the Marine Corps, will ask for retirement early next year. Sixty years old last August, he will complete 37 years' service in the Marines next May. His successor as Commandant of the Marine Corps Schools at Quantico probably will be Lt. Gen. O. P. Smith or Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Pollock.

THE ARMY'S ONLY WOMAN DENTIST is off for overseas duty again. Returned from Trieste a year ago, Capt. Helen E. Myers, who specializes in oral surgery, is en route to the Far East.

ARMY ASST. SEC'Y Hugh M. Milton, II, was strategically located when word of his appointment was flashed from the White House. General Milton was at West Point. His tremendous background in military personnel problems will permit him to plunge immediately into the many issues now current, particularly those involving the budget and legislative program, where speed is essential. Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell, whom General Milton succeeds, had an important say in selection of the new Asst. Sec'y. Like Asst. SecDef Hannah, the Army Asst. is a college president. He is on leave from the New Mexico Military Institute, was formerly president of New Mexico A&M, after having served as dean of engineering.

THE ARMY WAS JEALOUS this week when the Air Force announced that about 1600 airmen in the lowest mental qualification category—personnel who could not be expected to get ahead in military service—will be released involuntarily. The Army would like also to force out some men who are at the bottom of the Category Four group under the Qualitative Distribution Service, but are not optimistic about prospects for such a policy receiving approval. Meantime, Dr. Hannah is understood to be reviewing the entire "QD" policy to determine if any modifications should be made in light of changes in the manpower situation.

MORE THAN 90 Regular Army officers resigned from the Service during October, it was learned this week. About 45 were Medical Service officers, one of them a temporary colonel with 17 years' service.

In a discussion on the question of what the service wife can do to combat communism, the following advice was given to the AF wives. Be well-informed. Read, and become acquainted with national and international communism. Make sure the children are thoroughly grounded in the fundamental principles of Americanism. Keep up with what is going on in the schools. Be sure any organization she joins is not a communist front organization and does not become communist dominated. Remember that the cold war is a very real conflict that may last for years and will take great patience to endure. Remember also that in this global conflict, the service wife is a member of a team—the service team—and as such is making an important contribution to the western world.

The forum was arranged by Mrs. James B. Baker and Mrs. Alvin E. Hebert. Mrs. Raymond S. Sleeper acted as moderator.

"Merry Christmas, Nicholas"

FT. RITCHIE, MD. Half a world away, one little blue-eyed boy will have a merrier Christmas this year because of the far-sighted generosity of a group of American women, the Fort Ritchie Woman's Club of Cascade, Md. Because Nicholas E. Pavlov will be seven years old on 6 Dec., and because of Christmas, the Club is getting a box ready to be sent him by International Parcel Post as a combination birthday and Christmas gift.

Nicholas is their "adopted" child—assigned to them by the Save the Children Federation of Carnegie Endowment International Center, U.S. Plaza at 46th Street, New York 17, New York. Actually he is not adopted in the strict sense of the word, but is sponsored.

Mrs. Maurice C. Higgins, honorary president of the Fort Ritchie Woman's Club, and wife of the post commander, was asked what, if any, were the permanent plans for the child. Would he ever be brought to America? "I don't know," she replied. "We hope he will continue to be taken care of as long as there is a Fort Ritchie Woman's Club, even after most of the present members have moved on to other posts. We have no long-range plans other than month-to-month help." The Woman's Club contributes monthly, and this contribution covers the basic needs of one person in Greece; then there are special gifts including clothing, other necessities and toys which are sent occasionally.

This past summer the club decided that part of its funds should go toward stimulating international understanding and good will. They decided to bring new hope into the life of a child, who through no fault of his own, lacked many of the bare necessities of life that their own children take for granted.

Desiring specific contact with some individual, the club wrote the Save the Children Federation. Except for making a choice of the country (the federation sponsors children in Austria, Finland, France, Western Germany, Italy, Greece, Lebanon and Korea), the Woman's Club left all the details of selecting the child up to the federation.

"We particularly specified Greece," explained Mrs. Higgins, "because we felt that perhaps this nation was not receiving as much help as other nations in similar circumstances."

Brides' School In Japan Gives Advice On U. S. Life

AIR LOGISTIC FORCE, JAPAN. Realizing the many problems of adjustment the Japanese brides of American servicemen will encounter when they arrive in the U. S. to make their homes, the FEAMCOM-Tachikawa Air Base chapter of the American Red Cross recently conducted a Bride's School to help "Americanize" the brides of the men stationed at FEAMCOM and Tachikawa Air Bases.

Seventeen brides were graduated from the school which conducted courses in American cooking, government, history, geography, customs, and general information of life in the United States. The school had many excellent American movies with Japanese sound tracks depicting the American way.

Of special interest to the husbands, as well as the brides, was a basic cooking course with group participation and recipes written in Japanese. The course, conducted over a three week period, was concluded with a tour of the base commissary with demonstrations of meat cuts and bakery methods.

SEWART AFB, TENN. The Officers' Wives Club sponsored an open house for 25 children of the Tennessee Industrial School, Nashville on 7 Nov. The children made a complete tour of Sewart facilities.

FT. LEVENWORTH, KANS. Mrs. Donald C. McNair gave a sparkling performance to pace a well-rehearsed cast through "George Washington Slept Here," presented 5, 6 and 7 Nov. before record audiences. The Moss Hart—George S. Kaufman comedy launched the '53-'54 little theater season at the Command and General Staff College post. Two other productions are scheduled for the season which ends next April.

The scenario for "George Washington Slept Here" centers around a big-city couple, played by Mrs. McNair and Col. John W. Romlein, who became intrigued with the fact that our first president reputedly slept in a Pennsylvania farmhouse up for sale. The unwitting pair decide to buy and rehabilitate the place and therein lies the uproarious plot. Principal supporting roles went to Lt. Michael Shanahan, Lt. Col. W. O. Quirey, and teen-ager Charles R. Welsh, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. C. V. Welsh of the college faculty. Other members of the large cast included Mrs. D. R. Pickens, Mrs. L. J. Nawn, Mrs. S. O. Fuqua, Mrs. W. D. Gardiner, Mrs. C. L. McNeilly, Lt. G. H. Isley, Lt. Col. C. F. Kane, Lt. Col. C. C. DeReus, Mrs. J. C. Honea, Mrs. G. W. Groisser, and Pfc. Dean Ward.

Directing the cast was Lt. Col. P. L. Bogen, assisted by Mrs. J. A. Isbell. Technical director was Col. C. V. Ruzek, with Lt. Col. J. S. Zimmerman as set designer. Assisting in staging the show were Comdr. R. J. Baum, USN; Lt. Col. R. O. Rupp, Lt. Col. R. K. Hamilton, Lt. Col. R. W. Ernst, Lt. Col. G. A. Godding, Lt. Col. and Mrs. F. P. Murphy, Mrs. L. P. Kelser, Mrs. V. T. Losing, and Mrs. J. E. Olson. Mrs. J. C. Thomas was chairman of the ladies ticket sales committee.

Ft. Bliss Is 105

FT. BLISS, TEX. This post celebrated its 105th anniversary 7 Nov., with a military review on Noel Field and the placing of an anniversary wreath at the foot of the Memorial Flagpole.

Six battalions, with Col. Ara G. Lindley as commander of troops, participated in the review which was attended by hundreds of spectators. "Trooping of the line" by combined 62d and 65th Army Bands was a special feature of the parade.

In the reviewing party with Maj. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen, CG, were a group of El Paso, Texas, civic leaders and four El Pasoans who were stationed at Fort Bliss with the Cavalry in 1911, more than four decades ago. The veterans were J. H. Sanders, John Leasure, Isaac P. McKinney and Joe Kumer.

Placing of the huge memorial wreath, presented by the El Paso Chamber of Commerce, followed immediately on the closing of the review.

The triangular-shaped wreath was placed at the base of the flagpole by Mayor Fred Hervey of El Paso and E. M. Kelley, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Armed Forces Committee. The wreath, a border of golden chrysanthemums and autumn leaves, framed a composite picture of the early-day Fort Bliss and today's antiaircraft artillery and guided missiles.

Throughout the anniversary ceremonies, the huge garrison flag flew from the Memorial Flagpole, while the 30-star flag of 1848 fluttered from the hand-hewn flagpole at the Replica of Old Fort Bliss.

Fort Bliss was established by War Department Orders No. 58 of 7 Nov. 1848. Troops to set up the post had to march more than 650 miles across the wilderness and deserts of West Texas to reach the location of what is now El Paso. Setting out in the spring of 1849, they reached the "Pass of the North" in September of that year and immediately set up the Military Post of El Paso which a few years later was re-named Fort Bliss.

One of the nation's largest military posts, it is now the Army's Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center.

SecDef Wilson Gives View

have a specific statement on this matter next week.

Mr. Wilson did not go into detail on the commissary problem in meeting with reporters this week. He explained that Dr. Hannah was working on the policy, but indicated plainly that the Pentagon would strive to keep as many commissaries open, as possible, without going against the intent of Congress.

Notwithstanding the hopeful prospect that few commissaries will be closed, the Service Wives Coordinating Committee, with headquarters in the offices of the Gold Star Wives' Club at 1906 K Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., is not slowing the pace of its efforts to keep the commissaries open.

This group, whose membership includes wives of officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men from all the Uniformed Services, has been busy contacting key Defense officials and influential legislators on Capitol Hill, presenting to them information obtained in communications from Service wives around the world.

The Coordinating Committee also has established contact with top figures in industry, as was exemplified in the publication in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL of a lengthy letter on morale problems from a prominent manufacturer.

Adm. Land Tells Airline Role In Natl. Emergency

Plans have been made for the Air Force, in event of a national emergency, to take over certain civilian airliners and their crews for military transport service, Admiral Emory S. Land, USN-Ret., president of the National Transport Association, said this week.

Admiral Land, in a radio panel discussion sponsored by the American Legion, observed that airlines stand ready today to contribute "more than four times as many ton miles of airlift capacity as they contributed at the time of Pearl Harbor without serious disruption in normal civilian peace-time traffic."

"The civil reserve air fleet program agreed to by the Commerce and Defense Departments earmarked 294 four-engine airliners for transport overseas operations under a contract to the Military Air Transport Service," he said.

"On 48 hours notice," the admiral said, "the airlines will provide these airplanes with their skilled crews. This contribution to the national security would cost the military about $48 million plus the additional millions represented by hangars, spare parts and trained know-how. About half the airlines have already contracted with the Air Materiel Command to start at least part of the proposed modification. If necessary, the airlines will contribute more equipment, including skilled personnel."

Accept 40,000th Autopilot

Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Roger Lewis and Lt. Gen. E. W. Rawlings, chief of the Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, headed a group of AF officers and aircraft industry representatives who attended ceremonies at which the 40,000 electronic autopilot produced by the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. was formally presented to the Air Force.

"Production of the 40,000th electronic autopilot is a most important milestone in Honeywell's 68-year-old history and an outstanding tribute to our employees," A. M. Wilson, vice president in charge of the company's Aeronautical Division, said. "This is more autopilots than have been produced by any other manufacturer."

An autopilot is a complex control system that electronically duplicates most of the things done by a human pilot in putting a plane through a flight maneuver. The E-11 model being used today is helping pilots fly such supersonic jet bombers and fighters as the Northrop F-89, Douglas RB-66 and B-66, Canadian CF-100, and other planes still classified.

Shovel Co. Names CE Officer

The Board of Directors of The Thew Shovel Co. has announced appointment of E. E. Esgate as a Vice-President.

Mr. Esgate served with the Corps of Engineers both as a civilian and as an officer during WW II. As a civilian, he was Chief of the Construction Equipment Section, The Engineer Board, at Ft. Belvoir, Va. In that capacity, he was responsible for the design, development and testing of construction equipment for the Army Engineers in 1941 and 1946.

In the intervening years, he served as a Major in Europe in connection with the supply and application of construction equipment to Army Engineers in England and on the Continent.

USNA Grad Chief Engineer

J. C. Owen, a Naval Academy graduate, has been appointed Chief Engineer, Instrument Products of the Grand Rapids Division of Lear, Inc.

He will direct all engineering activities involving instrument products, and will concentrate on the development of new products and the broadening of the current line of aircraft instruments.

Prior to joining Lear, Mr. Owen, who is credited with a number of major contributions in the field of automatic flight, was senior engineer in charge of Systems Engineering activities at the Eclipse-Pioneer division of Bendix Aviation Corp.

570-MPH Jet Transport Designed by Fairchild

Plans for a completely new twin-jet high-speed air transport were announced this week by the Fairchild Aircraft Division at a special meeting with leading airline representatives in New York City.

Walter Tydon, Fairchild's chief design engineer, said that the new transport, designated as the M-186, was developed under the $1,500,000 research program announced last Spring by Richard S. De Bouteille, president of the firm. Another project, also in the planning stage, is that of a turboprop military aircraft planned for operation from unimproved fields. Details of the latter, however, are still classified.

The M-186 will be a high-wing transport built around what Fairchild calls a "cusp" wing. It will be powered by two Curtiss-Wright J-67 engines the thrust of which Fairchild said is estimated at 12,000 pounds minimum.

The "cusp" wing is a hybrid developed from the delta and a conventional straight wing. The designers say that it retains the advantages of the delta wing, having the thickness of the wing at the root for maximum strength as well as maximum space for power plant, gear and fuel. From the straight wing characteristics it offers an extended wingtip of higher aspect ratio for increased range, more trailing edge for flaps and ailerons, and the straight wing's stability at low speeds.

The M-186 is estimated to have a cruising speed of 570 miles per hour. It will carry a crew of three and 44 passengers.

Lt. Gen. "Pete" Quesada Named Division Manager

Lockheed Aircraft Corporation announced on 19 Nov. plans to establish a separate new division of the company to deal exclusively in the design, development and production of pilotless aircraft and missiles.

Heading the new division as vice president and general manager will be Lt. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, USAF-Ret., a prominent industrial executive who has been a member of Lockheed's board of directors since last May. He is a vice president of Olin Industries, Inc., one of the nation's diversified industrial organizations, and has been active in the management of that company's timber and mineral properties since 1951. Although he will resign his position as vice president 27 Nov. to assume the Lockheed post he will remain an Olin director.

The new Lockheed organization will be known as the Missile Systems Division, and in the beginning its headquarters will be in Lockheed's Burbank, Calif., plant where Lockheed for some years has been active in research in numerous branches of electronics, the field of unmanned aircraft and in applications of nuclear power. Lockheed contemplates that the new division will be installed in its own facilities as it grows beyond the research and development stage.

In announcing the new division, President Robert E. Gross said that important progress in current Lockheed work had prompted Lockheed's directors to approve immediate entry into the broad field of automatic flight.

"Our work in this field has been accomplished hitherto by separate groups of Lockheed engineers attached to individual projects or departments," Gross stated. "Recent important developments at Lockheed have brought us to the decision to regroup appropriate elements of this effort into a division to provide a nucleus for expansion at once on all fronts of missile systems research and development."

Prior to his association with Olin Industries, which is active in nine major fields of manufacturing, Lieutenant General Quesada commanded the task force conducting the Eniwetok nuclear experiments. He was closely associated with many aspects of ground-guided aircraft research in the Air Force and with numerous remote-control scientific operations related to the Eniwetok experiments and the Department of Defense.

"Long-range objectives of our new missile systems division cover the design, development and manufacture of pilotless aircraft, guided and ballistic missiles and their systems," Mr. Gross said.

Return Air Force C-54's

Pan American World Airways has announced return of six of a group of 16 C-54 airplanes leased from the Air Force in 1947. The other 10 will be returned shortly in accordance with a pre-arranged company plan to replace C-54s with newly delivered DC-6Bs.

The airplanes are part of a group of 37 the airlines were allowed to lease, but not to buy, after the war.

The planes, which have been used on the Pacific airlift and on the Berlin airlift as well as in regular cargo and passenger service, were in some cases saved from the scrap heap by the lease arrangement, PAA said.

World's Largest Transmitter Placed In Operation, Adm. Carney Gives First Message To Gen. Sarnoff

The world's most powerful radio transmitter flashed into operation in the Cascade mountains of Washington this week when the Navy accepted the giant Jim Creek Valley radio station from the Radio Corporation of America.

RCA Board Chairman, Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, tapped out the first message from Admiral Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, to units of the fleet in remote parts of the globe. Within minutes, acknowledgements of receipt were coming back from flag ships of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets, from Naval aircraft, from arctic outposts and from submarines beneath the surface.

In his message, Admiral Carney said the transmitter creates "a new security channel from America to the naval units which form its outer ramparts of defense."

Others participating in the ceremony were Rear Adm. Allan E. Smith, Commandant of the Thirteenth Naval District, and Rear Adm. William B. Ammon, Director of Naval Communications.

Located on a 6000 acre site 55 miles northeast of Seattle, Wash., and 20 miles inland from Puget Sound, the transmitter was designed and constructed by RCA at a cost of $14,000,000, and is staffed by four officers, 70 enlisted personnel and 35 civilians. It transmits in the VLF (very low frequency) range, with an output exceeding 1,200,000 watts.

The station, a six-year project of the Navy and RCA, was constructed to provide the Navy, for the first time, with instantaneous communication with fleet units everywhere. Its output is more than twice that of any existing military transmitter and twenty-two times greater than any commercial station in the U.S.

Jim Creek Valley was chosen as the site for the mammoth transmitter after an extensive search for an area which would meet special requirements. Under Navy and RCA planning, two mountains at least 2,500 feet high, of nearly equal height, with even crests two miles apart, and running parallel for a distance of one mile, were required for the project. Wheeler and Blue Mountains, which bound the Jim Creek Valley and whose 3,000-foot height varies only 46 feet, met these conditions.

Equipment for the transmitter was constructed at the RCA Victor plant at Camden, N. J., and transported to the area in 27 railroad freight cars. Twelve 200-foot antenna towers, six on the summit level of each ridge, hold the ten miles of copper cable interlacing the two mountains.

Admiral Ammon said "The trials and tribulations of slashing trails, bulldozing roads and clearing selected areas, to hoist the single wire 8,000 foot antenna span for the test transmission is a story to match any of those in the history of 'taming the West!'"

General Sarnoff said the completed structure "stands as an enduring testimonial to teamwork." He noted that RCA has been "ably assisted by more than 175 other business firms that supplied us with parts and components for the transmitter," and that "they deserve high commendation for their part in a job well done—a job that typifies American Industry's teamwork with the Armed Forces."

"When we look at this big structure," General Sarnoff said, "we must remember that while its skeleton is concrete, steel and copper, its heart is the electron—the tiniest thing in the Universe." He noted that continuing advances in the electronics field will lead to new uses of the electron for military as well as commercial purposes.

"Recent scientific developments," he said, "make it possible to span the oceans with radar information that can be relayed from plane to plane. The range and scope of detection and warning systems can be extended beyond the continental boundaries. Enemy planes and missiles could be tracked down and destroyed at considerable distances away from their intended targets. We must harness the electron for maximum mobility."

Officer in Charge of the station is Comdr. G. W. Warren, USN.
